LAMPAS

STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE
AT BOSTON
CLASS OF 1956

DEDICATION

To our Parents,

who have guided and inspired us,

this book is gratefully and lovingly dedicated.

Anne Morrow Lindbergh said—and we all recognize and share the emotion—that departures are “that indefinable lump in the chest . . . the going away lump, that had been there when I was a child and was as uncontrollable now as then. Leaving . . . any place that you had made with difficulty and affection your home.”

Administration

To the Class of 1956 —

The entrance of the class of 1956 to our college coincided with the start of a new era in the history of the institution. On the day that you enrolled as freshmen, what had been a Boston institution passed into the service of the entire Commonwealth. With your coming, the State Teachers College at Boston came into being.

I look back today upon your college career as the augury of a new and successful era. A second century and a second service are beginning for our college. I think of you as the sons and daughters of good omen and high promise. May your individual lives know that same high promise in all its rich and joyful fulfillment.

WILLIAM F. LOONEY, President

OUR DEANS

MISS MARGARET M. SALLAWAY

Consider that I laboured not for myself only, but for all them that seek learning.

— Apocrypha

MR. HERBERT REGAN

Knowledge is, indeed, that which, next to virtue, truly and essentially raises one man above another.

— Addison

TO THE PRESIDENT AND THE FACULTY

To you, Dr. William F. Looney, and to the members of the faculty, the class of 1956 says thank you. We thank you for having instilled in us the ideals of responsibility, understanding, and patience — qualities which you yourselves have shown us in our years at the college. Our words now express our appreciation; our future deeds in the teaching profession will act as a living memorial of our gratitude to you.

CLUB ACTIVITIES

Club activities are an integral part of the college life of our students. They provide creative, social, and intellectual interests which serve to broaden and enrich the student's outlook. Moreover, clubs aid in developing worthy leaders and citizens, interested and alert in current affairs.

All activities in the college are under the jurisdiction of the Student Government Association, a democratic and co-operative organization in which each section of the college is represented by a councilor who voices the opinion of the students in his section. The executive board is composed of a president and first vice-president from the Senior class; a second vice-president and secretary from the Junior class; and a treasurer from the Sophomore Class.

At weekly meetings, extra-curricular activities and topics of interest to the college and students are discussed. Open House Night, the All-College Dinner, the Christmas Party, and the Christmas Semi-Formal are some of the activities sponsored by the S.G.A.

This year a Spaghetti Supper, Sports Night, and a Variety Show were initiated by the S.G.A.

The Welfare Club works smoothly and efficiently to help citizens of the surrounding community. Under the guidance of Miss Ruth Bulger, club officers and class representatives distribute Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets to the needy. This year club representatives did volunteer work at the Metropolitan State Mental Hospital and the Perkins Institute for the Blind. Next year the club will be known as the Social Service Club.

Students interested in Science may join the Science Club which offers outings, tours of industrial plants, films, and lectures. Dr. Mary Lynch is faculty advisor.

Aesthetic interests are provided by the Art, the Literary, the Drama, and the Music Clubs. Under the leadership of Mr. Robert Bertolli, the Art Club seeks to develop the talent of the interested art students. The entire college is grateful for the colorful posters and the attractive staging for the Drama Club productions.

The Drama Club, under the direction of Dr. Collins, provides an opportunity for acting and for becoming acquainted with the techniques and literature of the theatre. The Christmas pageant and several well-known plays are produced throughout the year. The students always anticipate the most ambitious production of the Drama Club, the Junior Play held in May.

The Music Club, under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Ann O'Brien, has brought honor and delight to the college. Members have sung at various civic functions including the Governor's Inauguration at the State House, the Mayor's Inauguration at Symphony Hall, the Governor's Washington's Birthday Reception, the Christmas activities at the Long Island Hospital, and the Christmas party held at the Adams Street Branch Library. The Music Club also entertains at teachers' conventions, at Christmas, at Graduation, at Class Day, and at other college functions.

In order to enrich the literary horizons of its members, the Literary Club provides guest speakers, theatre parties, and intellectual and stimulating discussions at the bi-monthly meetings. Dr. Regina Madden is faculty advisor.

Through the activities of the Spanish and French Clubs, students gain an understanding of the contributions of other nations to our culture. Discussions and theatre parties are under the guidance of Miss Katherine Barr and Miss Edith Gartland.

Two new additions to the club program are the Camera Club and the Veteran's Club. Members of the Camera Club discuss techniques of photography, manage photo contests, and hold outings during the year. Because of the influx of veterans, the Veteran's Club already has a large membership. Discussions, informal parties, and films provide entertainment for club members.

Students with a flair for writing find an outlet in Chalkdust, our college newspaper. Sports activities, news, and features are covered in Chalkdust, which is continuing to expand. In May, 1955, Chalkdust was host to the First Massachusetts Teachers' College Publications Conference and recently joined the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. The hard working staff is under the guidance of Miss Marjorie Holt.

The Greek Orthodox, Hillel, Newman Club, and Protestant Fellowship, attend to the religious and social needs of the student with films, lectures, discussions, and socials.

Participation in the club activities provides the student with enjoyment, satisfaction, and pleasant college days. When the student graduates, he has had the opportunities of co-operating and sharing with others.

FASHION SHOW

The fashion show presented by the Senior Class is a tradition at Teachers College. Once again we experience that sense of wonder and delight, of touching upon the romantic, which colors the word "fashions." We linger upon that word and the bewitching visions it evokes.

Bright bolts of fabrics waltzing into spring: — the luxury of fine linens delicately woven, the jewel tones of Italian cotton, and the whisper of silk, petal soft. The cardigan, with its classic simplicity, is a year long companion in cashmere, lambswool and orlon, designed for all occasions, etched with pearls and beading, edged in satin and velvet, touched with wisps of fur. Also, for the college girl with a penchant for lovely sweaters, fashions bring thoughts of the dressmaker style, the irresistible collared cardigan, the bulky, carelessly stunning jacket sweater, and the evening "scoop."

And for the bride, fashions mean the ageless beauty of ivory and candlelight satin, the wealth of tradition in rare lace, the swirl of bouffant, the sweep of tulle, organdy and taffeta. Spring bridesmaids are in "crocus," tinted organza and chiffon.

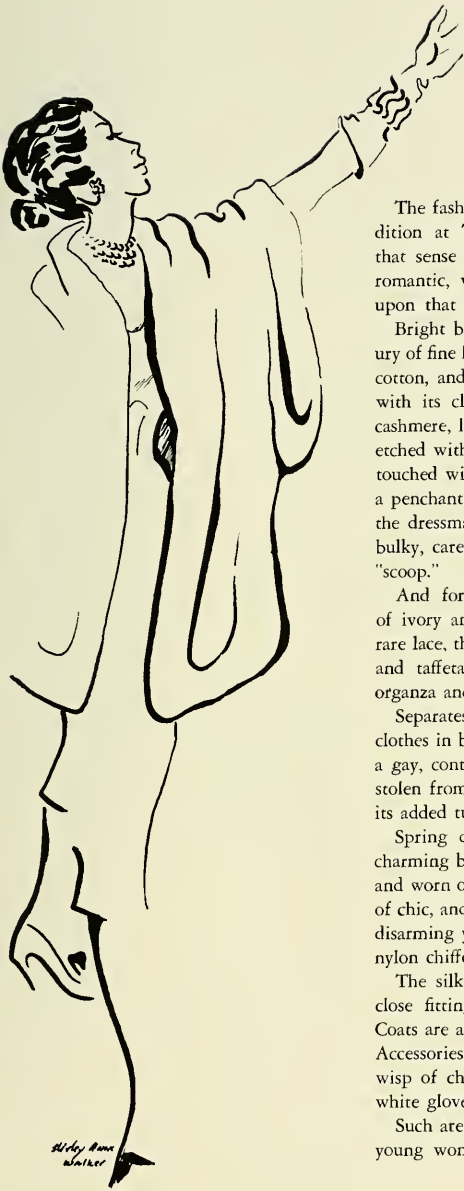

Separates are always a favorite as are the casual play clothes in brilliant colors, bathing suits, and playshoes with a gay, continental flavor, which were modeled. The shirt stolen from the college boy will always be cherished with its added tucking, frills and ruffles.

Spring dresses which were shown are distinctive for charming boleros, collared with a scarf in the Dior vogue, and worn over prints. The sheath dress is still the epitome of chic, and still popular are the princess and empire lines, disarming yoke effects and touches of Paris in full skirted nylon chiffon dresses.

The silk coat is worn over the silk dress which has a close fitting bodice and billowy skirt paneled in back. Coats are also done in cotton tweed, and "knit-look" wool. Accessories include the patent leather bag, pill-box hat, wisp of chiffon scarf, and the always present, impeccable white gloves.

Such are the images of the fresh, trim, and fashion wise young woman. radiating that happy look.

ATHLETICS

The school year of 1955-56 marked an important step upward in athletic circles by the State Teachers College at Boston. The college made its debut in the powerful New England Teachers College Athletic Conference.

Since the basketball team made our initial entry into league competition, interest ran high in the student body. Prospects for the season looked bright. Four of the five top scorers were returning, led by George Lathuras, who is the owner of virtually every scoring record in the school's history. Other returning starters included jumpshooters Jack Daniels and Jack Howlett. Reserves who had seen considerable game action included backcourt men Bill McBride and Bob Currier. To these already impressive abilities were added the speed and hustle of George Shdeed, the play-making and scoring of Leo Walsh, and the rebounding power of Jim Nester. This last trio emerged as promising stars from the freshmen.

The season had not progressed far, however, when it was obvious that the atmosphere of the new league was not conducive to a winning record. In virtually every game during the season, our green-and-gold hoopsters were confronted with the superior height and the overall team speed of their opponents.

During the season, however, Boston Teachers played against the finest basketball team ever encountered in the school's brief athletic history, that of the New Britain Teachers College of Connecticut, an exceptionally big, sharp-shooting squad which typified the fine calibre of teams in the league. One of the highlights of the season was Boston's thrilling, last-second win over Bridge-water Teachers by a score of 83-82.

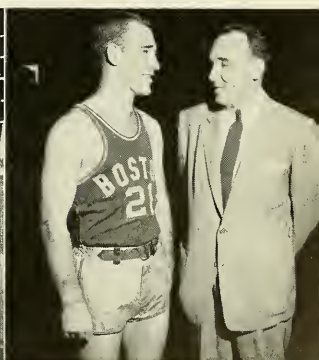

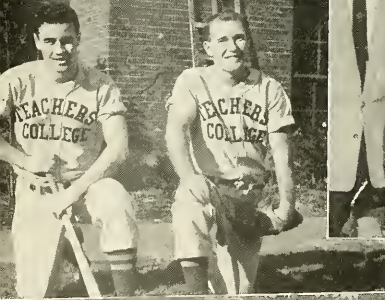

Although the team finished in the second division, we anticipate a better record next year. The future of our team seems much more promising with the overall expansion of the school and with the promise of improved athletic facilities. This belief is based greatly on the untiring efforts of our athletic director and coach Mr. James Sullivan, who also holds the position of publicity director in the New England Teachers College Athletic Conference.

The baseball team gave some promise of compensating for the losses suffered during the basketball season. The 1955 squad returned intact — the same squad which although not an official member itself, faced and defeated many of the league teams.

Included in this squad were pitchers Bert Mul-lancy, John Brennan, and George Lathuras, working with their capable catcher Bill McBride. The triple threat combination of shortstop Bob Currier, second baseman Jack Howlett, and first sacker Bill Walsh was effective. Third base position was occupied by Bob McDonough, the team's leading hitter. Outfielders who split the starting assignments included Al Ross, Tom Kerrigan, Dick Skinner, and Paul Collins. Newcomers who promised to crack the returning line were freshmen Leo Walsh and Paul Connelly. Bob Lynch, an ex-serviceman, also returned to the team.

Because of the excellent combination of experience, defensive skill, pitching, and hitting, the Boston Teachers College nine will chalk up an impressive record during the spring of 1956.

Retrospect

CLASS ESSAY

With the increase in scientific research and invention, the United States has attained a position of world leadership since the Great Depression. The experiences of two world wars have hastened the death of American isolationism. No longer can we look at Europe and Asia without concern. The principles of democracy which we enjoy and which are responsible for our remarkable development can help the people of the world to help themselves. Education plays no mean part in the spread of democracy. Indeed, it is the crux of personal and national development. In order to understand more fully the burden placed on education today, let us review the changing world since 1930.

We, the graduating class of 1956, are children of the Great Depression. It was at this time that the United States had its first taste of technological unemployment, a change viewed with despair. The effects of the depression on the whole social structure were serious. Social services were reduced to the barest minimum, marriages were postponed, the number of suicides increased. Federal aid under the New Deal alleviated the suffering and paved the way for an economic comeback.

Our generation had known peace for only a relatively short time. During World War II, most of us were old enough to remember uniforms in the family, ration books, and blue and gold stars in windows. But we were not mature; we were not aware of the waste of national resources and the tremendous loss of life. All that we understood were the outward symbols of war. The fact that the United States had hastened the end of the war by dropping the most destructive weapon known to science did not disturb us. It did, however, present a problem of international concern; namely, what would be the uses of atomic power in the future?

In this decade, atoms are known to be used in research in medicine and science. Probable constructive uses of the atom will include atomic-powered ships and planes in transportation, atomic rockets to explore the universe, and atoms for power and energy in industry.

Close on the heels of World War II, came the Korean conflict. To many of the members of our class it meant active participation in the war. To the rest of us it meant freedom for South Korea which is vital to the spread of democracy. Above all, this experience with war made us think seriously about the world of the future and the part which we, as educators, are to play in it. We have become genuinely concerned with the aims of education.

One of the salient aims of education today is to prepare children for citizenship in a scientific age. The need for such preparation is evident. Products of science are an important part of our way of life. Scientific development continues to expand in all directions, to become more important and closely related to our work, travel, food, clothing, and shelter. We want children to understand science as a part of their daily environment. We want to help them to understand the scientific basis of such issues as conservation, flood control, and atomic energy which face us and our elected representatives.

Yet the scientific knowledge by itself is inadequate. We must base our teaching on the philosophy that science is a human project and therefore, carries with it a social and moral responsibility. Science has brought progress, but the rate and direction of further progress depends on our children. Will their knowledge manifest itself in peace through international cooperation, in constructive uses of the atom, in success in controlling our machine civilization? Or will science spell destruction, the degeneration of advanced cultures into paleolithic societies? The answer lies with our children, and thus with us who train them. We must impress on them that science is only a tool, that it must be made to serve man, that man must use it only under the restrictions of God's law.

As educators, we ask God to grant us the wisdom never to lose sight of the great influence we wield over the future of the world. May He give us the strength to use this influence to the greatest benefit of man.

Anna R. Stiles

CLASS POEM

The vast resplendent day
Awaits his small, firm foot,
His waking to a sense of multiform;
Discoverer of this untraversed way,
He breathes the nard of earth,
The redolence of growing spring,
He sips the chaliced wine of autumn days,
He knows the quiet rush of lucent rain.
The child's earth turns.
Strong is the grass, long growing
Its shafts dark gold.
There is no bridge of time, of space
To ancient sunrise,
To wayward flame of shredded leaf.
Now is a gentle hour,
The dust is seamed with starlight
And all the ways untrod.

Life is such little time
For all that we must do,
The ends not wide nor long enough
For giving to be limitless.
Yet love shall wake to shadows of eternity,
Shall grow from the sanctity of littleness;
In every child may there be gladness then,
And joy in all that hands and mind can give
"For the end shall be as the beginning."

Virginia Finnegan

CLASS SONG 1956

College friends are leaving soon;
New paths are pointing different ways.
Although the future calls to us,
Our thoughts turn to our college days.

We sing with mingled feelings,
Parring joys are tinged with sorrow;
Our four years have passed too quickly,
Now our eyes turn toward tomorrow.

May we see in coming years
Our Lamp still bright and high;
In thy praise we lift our voices:
Alma Mater, we sing goodbye—
Alma Mater, we sing goodbye.

Words by Virginia Humber

Music by Marlena Harris

In the Laboratory . . .

It seems hardly possible that we are now graduates; yet it is true, and with a glow of pride, we conclude our four months' experience as student teachers. We fondly remember the foibles and pitfalls which we feel are now behind us.

Young and feeling rather unsure, we presented a formidable appearance to the youngsters and buried our tremblings behind fortresses of studied calm. For the benefit of those to follow, we particularly leave these warnings concerning the pitfalls of a student teacher. Naturally, we ourselves avoided these pitfalls, being an exceptionally cautious ninety-six, but we have heard about them from sources which will remain anonymous.

First, what appears to our wondering eyes but the fractional type student teacher. This poor unfortunate enters the classroom confidently, sans written lesson plan because it is carefully arranged in his head, and then proceeds to go to pieces. In fear and trembling, he is bombarded by a host of questions which have the diabolical intent of unnerving the teacher.

MORAL: Plot your lesson plans carefully.

Secondly, we see the adoring young student who enters the scene with a misty smile in her eyes as she views the angelic faces of her charges. Love suffuses her countenance as she proffers her hankie or joyfully accepts their six-year-old bearhugs whenever they feel particularly affectionate. This type is always faintly aromatic of jam, peanut butter, and clay and spends her evenings at home with cleaning fluid.

MORAL: Wear simple, washable clothing.

Thirdly, we remember the peripatetic student teacher who is a dynamo of unleashed energy. This type fires his pupils with such a high degree of enthusiasm that they are scarcely able to contain themselves. He rushes from corner to corner letting a veritable stream of eloquence flow from his lips and become the object of his swivel-headed children's eyes.

MORAL: Serve vitamin pills with the morning milk.

Lastly, we find the ardent admirer of visual aids who feels that the bigger the aid the better the results. This inspired student teacher desires to motivate his pupils to the loftiest heights ever. Consequently he becomes a potential enemy to society as he clammers aboard the EI with all manner of wires, strings, balls, boards, and electrical devices. Panting and exhausted, he deposits his means of motivation in the classroom for his highly enthusiastic charges.

MORAL: Purchase a car as soon as possible.

Perhaps these descriptions will be of value to future student teachers, who may possibly be able to add to them for posterity.

CLASS HISTORY

FRESHMAN YEAR:

Hence, loathed Melancholy,
Of high school days just gone
In Assembly Hall forlorn
Mongst horrid shapes, and shrieks, and sights unholy.
'Tis only a Freshman.

The Rise and Fall of the Freshman Empire

As we fearfully entered our Freshman year, one desire dominated all others — to get out of the Freshman locker room. The following event failed to daunt us — Initiation Day, headed by the noblest Roman of them all. Nevertheless, we strove gallantly forward taking copious notes in Psychology, writing the biography of "My Last Duchess," and speaking orally in English. A crushing blow — our first midyears — weakened the empire, but the Spring Swing was the final victory which topped the year.

SOPHOMORE YEAR:

My mind to me a kingdom is
I little had, and so sought more
And so we sought and sought and sought
And appreciations fine were taught, taught, taught.

PRIZE-WINNING RECIPE

Courtesy of Yoakam and Simpson

Cost — $100

Ingredients:

One Romanesque post and lintel — preferably a photograph
2 volumes of THE ENGLISH HERITAGE — well beaten
1 1/2 amoebas — finally chopped
1 cup of graded American Model School
A dash of Beau and Arrow Ball
Mix well each Friday in chlorinated pool until hair becomes straight.
Simmer 50 minutes.
Blend in "Variations of a Mutation" by Ludvig Grendel.
Let stand at school temperature for 2 semesters.
Yield — 120 Sophomores.

JUNIOR YEAR:

Gather ye visual aids while ye may
Old time is still a-flying.
And this lesson plan so correct today
Tomorrow will be dying.

SENIOR YEAR:

What we expected was
Thunder, fighting,
Long struggles with children
Lesson planning.

What we got was thunder, fighting, long struggles with children, lesson planning — two a day. "Good morning, teacher." "Is it absolutely necessary?"

Prescribed books for student teachers:
MOTIVATION FOR ALL OCCASIONS
YOU TOO CAN TEACH FRACTIONS
WHY TEACHERS NEED MANUALS
QUOTABLE QUOTES

Music: Guido says, "Everyone can sing on my two line staff."

Sociology: Write 3500 words on. "Why Schorling and Wingo is now Wingo and Schorling."

Health: "Do you have your teeth with you?"

Seminar: "There was square dancing at the Autumn Leaves." Explain, people.

Required Reading:

1. An abridged edition of Reader's Digest for Busy Seniors by Jonathan Edwards
2. THE TIMES THAT TRY MEN'S SOULS pp. 1952-1956
"But far above and far as sight endures
There runs the quick perspective of the future — a teacher."
